

The article is devoted to the problem of contemporary environmental education in the process of teaching foreign languages. We take into consideration the importance of creating environmental schools as the essence of cultural and linguistic development of students owing to the educational potential of a foreign language.